Introduction

If the children have done the 'Secret or Surprise?' lesson in Y3 or Y4 you can review what they learned here with some key questions:

- What is a surprise?
- What is a secret?
- Are all surprises secrets?
- Are all secrets surprises?
- How might a secret make someone feel? Some secrets are safe to keep and some secrets are unsafe and we need to talk to someone about them.
- Can anyone think of an example of a safe or an unsafe secret?

Activity

Read children the story 'Chris's secret'. Ask their children for their reaction to the story.

NB: it is very important to depersonalise the discussion in this lesson - explore the scenarios in the third person as children may have sensitive issues that they may bring up in the lesson. Start by reinforcing ground rules about not talking about personal situations or mentioning anyone's name.

Follow the story with some questions for discussion by the class:

- Was Chris right to tell Scott what was worrying him?
- Who else could Chris have told?
- How do you think the situation made Chris feel?

- Do you think he felt differently after he had told Scott?
- Chris asked Scott not to tell anyone else i.e. he told him what was worrying him in confidence.
- Is it ever Ok to 'break a confidence' and tell someone else?
- What advice would you give to Chris in this situation?
- What advice would you give to Scott in this situation?

Give out the 'Dear Ash' activity sheet.

Ask children to choose one of the scenarios and consider what advice they would give the person who wrote the letter in that situation. Children can either write their advice as Ash or they can role-play the situation as if it were a radio show where people phone in with their problems. One child can take the part of the person who phones in with the problem and the other takes the part of the radio presenter who is giving advice.

Summing up

Ask children to share their responses to the problems – either by reading their responses out loud or acting out their role play to the rest of the class. Does everyone agree with the advice given?

In the 'Dear Ash' scenarios the children had written to a fictitious person for advice. Ask the children to brainstorm together all the people that they can turn to for help and advice in difficult situations. Ideas could include:

- Parent or carer
- Other family members
- Teacher
- Teaching assistant
- Headteacher
- Midday supervisor
- Other school based staff
- Friends

- Childline 0800 1111

Discuss when it is appropriate to 'break a confidence'?
For example, when someone is in an unsafe situation.

We often talk about keeping something confidential.
What does this mean? Ask the children to consider what sort of information the following people might need to keep confidential (they could discuss these in pairs or threes):

- Teacher
- Doctor
- Lawyer
- School administrator
- Bank manager

Can anybody think of any other time when it is important to keep information confidential?

Activity sheet
Dear Ash...

Ash writes an advice column in a teen magazine. Look at the following situations that people have written to Ash about. Consider what advice Ash would give to the person.

Next, choose one situation and write a response to it, as Ash. Alternatively you could work in pairs to create a roleplay where one person takes on the role of Ash and the other takes on the role of the person with the problem who calls in to Ash's radio programme for advice.

Dear Ash,
My best friend at school keeps pinching me under the table and trying to make me laugh or call out. She thinks it's really funny but I'm getting tired of it now. She's told me not to tell the teacher as she thinks we'll both get into trouble for messing about in the lesson. What do you think I should do?

Dear Ash,
My brother is only sixteen but the other day I saw him sneak some cans of lager from his school bag and put them under his bed. He caught me watching and said I wasn't to tell mum and dad or he would tell them about the time I took a cake from the kitchen cupboard. What do you think I should do?

Dear Ash,
When we were changing in PE the other day I noticed that my friend had a nasty bruise on his leg. When I asked him about it he just went very quiet and said he'd hurt it on the trampoline at home. I'm sure he was lying as he looked very uncomfortable about it and quickly changed the subject. He also said not to tell anyone else that I'd seen the bruise as he didn't want a big fuss over it. I think something else might be going on but I'm not sure what. What do you think I should do?

Dear Ash,
My best friend told me she had been playing out with her bike the other evening and had accidentally fallen onto her mum's rear end and put a great big scratch on the door. Her mum hasn't mentioned it yet and she doesn't know whether to admit that as she thinks she'll be in big trouble. She really worries about it and has told me not to say anything to my mum and dad because they might tell her mum and dad. I feel really bad knowing what she did and what I might be told someone. What do you think I should do?

Story sheet
Chris's secret

Chris and Scott were best friends. They did loads of things together as they had very similar interests. They also felt they could tell each other the things that they couldn't tell anyone else.

One morning Chris came into school but wasn't his usual bouncy, cheerful self. Scott knew that something was up.

'What's up, mate?' he asked.

'Oh nothing,' said Chris but Scott knew that unusually Chris was keeping something to himself. He decided to leave it for the moment.

At lunchtime the two of them went on to the field to play. Chris still wasn't quite himself and Scott decided to try and find out what was up. 'Listen,' he said, 'Let's walk to the other end of the field away from everyone else and you can tell me what's on your mind.'

As soon as they got to the far end of the field Chris began to open up. 'Things are really tough at home at the moment, he said. 'Dad lost his job a couple of weeks ago and he just seems to be in a bad mood all the time. Mum and I have been arguing and he's been snapping at me and my sister. He even snore at me the last night when I left all my toys out in my bedroom. I've never seen him like this before and I'm worried that he might get violent and hit one of us.'

'Thanks for telling me,' said Scott, 'it always feels better to tell someone else when something is worrying you.'

'Please don't tell anyone I've told you,' said Chris.
